Ladner guilty, receives death sentence

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

And DENA BISNETTE

Jeffrey Joseph Ladner is scheduled to be put to death Nov. 30 by lethal injection for the murder of Jeanette Holden.

Judge James Thomas pronounced the death sentence to Ladner approximately 6 p.m. Saturday following a recommendation by a nine-women, three-men jury.

Thomas also told Ladner that the date for his execution would be stayed automatically pending an appeal to the Mississippi Court of Appeals.

Deliberation by the jury took approximately five hours.

Ladner, who is 30 years old, showed no display of emotion following the sentencing but his mother, Margie Jacob, had to be assisted from the courtroom.

Following the trial, Ladner's wife, Candace, said the "whole thing was rigged."

Mrs. Ladner's sister, Debbie Penny also said all the facts in this case had not been revealed.

"There were facts held back in this case that would have helped Jeffrey," Penny stated.

According to Penny, the Louisiana State Police obtained evidence in the case by heresay and that tapes of conversations which would have helped Ladner had "mysteriously disappeared."

Dennis Grabert, son of the murdered woman, said he was glad to see justice served.

"This will not bring my Mother back, but at least justice was served," Grabert added.

Ladner's trial for the murder of Holden began Wednesday morning after almost two days of jury selection.

Prosecution attorneys in the case were Jay Golden and Cono Caranna.

William Frisbie and Albert Necaise were attorneys for the defense.

In addition to the murder of Holden, Ladner is also charged with capital murder in the death of Dorothy Tassin, Holden's mother.

The bodies of both women were discovered Nov. 11, 1985 in a mobile home on US-90 west of Waveland by Holden's daughter, Tessie Barnes.

Both women had been shot in the head and numerous items of jewelry were reported as missing.

Ladner was arrested in River Ridge after being identified by jewelry store workers where he had taken a ring identified as one taken from Holden.

On Friday evening the jury had returned a verdict of guilty to Ladner for Holden's murder while committing a robbery.

SENTENCING

In the sentencing phase of the trial which started Saturday morning, defense attorneys called four character witnesses.

Among those testifying were Jeffrey Ladner's uncle, his mother and an uncle by marriage who all testified that Jeffrey Ladner had "idolized" his father.

John Ladner, the uncle, said Jeffrey's father was "not the family type."

"He very seldom worked and would go off and leave the family to get drunk," John Ladner said of his brother the late Ray Ladner.

John Ladner said Jeffrey Ladner had moved in with him at about age 12, following the death of Ray Ladner in an automobile accident.

After a couple of years, Jeffrey Ladner went on to stay with someone else and during the next nine years lived with approximately 14 different families, John Ladner testified.

Leo Guidry, Jeffrey Ladner's uncle by marriage, said he had known Ladner since he was six months old.

He also testified as to Ladner's home life, which included a history of being evicted from homes for non-payment of rent and often the utilities were disconnected.

LADNER'S MOTHER TESTIFIES

Jeffrey Ladner's mother, Margie Jacob of Utica, New York, agreed with earlier testimony about his home life not being "very pleasant."

Jacob testified the family had been evicted three times for not paying the rent and had lived by candlelight many times because they were unable to pay utility bills.

She also said Ladner became detached from the family following the death of his father and moved to Mississippi to be in the state where his father was buried.

"I knew he loved me but he never showed it, maybe I didn't show him enough love," she said.

STATE'S ARGUMENTS

Golden told the jury in closing arguments during the sentencing phase of the trial, they were like a surgical team.

Seeing a patient with a vicious and malignant cancer the doctor must remove this, he said.

"For the good of society (Ladner) should be removed," Golden stated.

Caranna told the jury, it was the last part of the system of law including a 200-year old constitution which allows the death penalty.

"When you get back to the jury room, you are the system, I hope the system works," he said.

DEFENSE ARGUMENTS

"I wonder sometimes why we kill to prove that killing is wrong," Frisbie told the jury.

"I would not want to live forever with the memory that on Oct. 24, 1987 I had to be a part of a firing squad," he continued.

Frisbie said, "but a jury is different from a firing squad because they have a blank among the members, but it takes a unanimous vote for the death penalty."

Necaise said he was going to take a few minutes to try and persuade and literally beg the jury to save this man's life.

He told the jury to look into the background of this young man and see that he never had a chance.

"Look into your hearts and see if you can be the ones to give him a chance and grant him mercy," Necaise said.

PROSECUTION RESTS

DEFENSE RESTS

After the prosecution rested its case, the judge talked extensively with Ladner and his attorneys about the decision of Ladner's testifying.

When Ladner told the judge it was his decision not to testify, the defense rested its case.

Closing arguments in the case took about two hours.

The jury took only about 90 minutes to decide the guilty verdict.

The verdict was reported about 7 p.m. Friday evening and the sentencing phase of the trial was scheduled for Saturday.

TESTIMONY FRIDAY

Among the witnesses testifying for the prosecution Friday were Hancock County Sheriff's Investigator Glen Strong; Darlene Wilson, a former employee at the Brass Anchor; and Sgt. Allen Tidwell, a firearm identification from the New Orleans Police Department.

Strong's testimony was brief as he related his actions at the scene where Holden and Tassin were killed.

He listed his duties at the trailer as dusting for fingerprints, taking photographs and looking for other items of tangible evidence.

Strong also identified a photograph of Tassin's body taken in the trailer.

Taking the witness stand next for the prosecution was Darlene Wilson of Shoreline Park, a former

BMR predicts poor oyster harvest

The director of the Mississippi Bureau of Marine Resources in Long Beach predicts a poor harvest by oyster fishermen during the season which opens Monday.

"We don't anticipate anyone finding anything except on St. Joseph and the St. Stanislaus" reefs in Hancock County," said Richard Leard, the bureau director.

This year's harvest will be "as bad as if not worse than last year."

However, the only reefs closed will be closed by the state Health Department because of contamination in the water, not by the bureau because of barren oyster reefs.

The bureau, however, can close places it planted shells to expand the reefs last year. Those include portions of St. Joseph, St. Stanislaus and Waveland reefs in Hancock County.

Leard said he didn't know which reefs would be open because the state Health Department has not finished testing.

However, he also said that the lack of rainfall this month probably means that all of the oyster reefs outside the Bay of St. Louis, Biloxi Bay and Back Bay will be open.

Those reefs include St. Joseph's dredge reef in Hancock County, the dredge reef at Henderson Point in Harrison County, St. Stanislaus and Waveland tonging reefs in Hancock County, White House tonging reef in Harrison County, and Jackson County tonging reefs at Bangs Lake, Bayou Cumbest, and Riglettes.

Boat limits on tonging reefs will be six sacks a day. Boat limits on dredging reefs will be 10 sacks a day.

Last year Mississippi oyster reefs were played out by January after being open for a total of three weeks in November and December.

And although the season opened last year in the second week of November, heavy rains in early December washed fecal coliform contamination into the Sound and caused the Health Department to close all of the state's reefs in early December.

Leard said that for the third straight year the problem is oyster drills, marine snails that feed on oysters.

The drills are able to attack the reefs when the salinity rates in the Mississippi Sound are abnormally high.

Because of the dry weather this fall the salinity rate is high.

The Hancock County reefs have managed to have live oysters because of the constant source of fresh water from the Pearl River.

bartender at the Brass Anchor. According to Wilson, she began working at the Brass Anchor on Christmas Eve in 1985 when the bar opened and continued in employment there until early October 1986.

Wilson testified she had seen Ladner in the Brass Anchor "a couple of times" during the last month she had worked at the lounge.

She also said, when Ladner came in the bar, he ordered a mixed drink and sat all alone at the end of the bar until he finished his drink and left.

She also said she had identified Ladner to law enforcement officials as having been at the Brass Anchor in early December.

Necaise questioned Wilson extensively about how she happened to recall Ladner as a customer at the lounge in face of all the customers she had served as a bartender.

WILSON TESTIFIED she recalled

Ladner because he had sat alone and did not talk to anyone.

"Not too many come in and not talk to people, most customers come in to have a drink and have someone to talk to because they are lonely," she stated.

Necaise also questioned Wilson about the location and color of a telephone at the lounge which Wilson was unable to readily supply.

The final witness for the prosecution was Tidwell, who was qualified by the court as an expert witness in the field of firearm identification.

Tidwell testified that he had probably conducted more than a thousand firearm identification procedures.

Big Bird faces new challenges

Old stuff to newspaper reporters, business executives and Federal Express, deadlines pose a new and critical challenge to Big Bird and his Sesame Street friends in the all-new Sesame Street Live production "Big Bird Goes Hollywood," opening Tuesday for three performances at the Mississippi Coast Coliseum.

Just 60 minutes and a band of helpful Muppet stars stand between Guy Smiley's dream of success as a movie tycoon and mere employment as a game show host. Having won a movie studio from the sleazy partnership of Izzie Great and Wuzzy Wonderful, Smiley stands to lose it all unless an hour deadline for the filming of a movie is met.

The countdown to a happy ending takes Big Bird, Cookie Monster, Bert, Ernie, Grover, Prairie Dawn, Oscar the Grouch, Barkley the Dog, the Count—and the audience—on a trip down memory lane, Hollywood style. The sampling of movie styles and situations embraces a jungle adventure, space voyage, a Latin American dance extravaganza, a monster sequence and an Abbott and Costello reminiscence, punctuated by a dab of doo wop and a lot of lively songs and dances and audience participation.

"For many youngsters, Sesame Street Live provides a pleasurable and exciting introduction to live theater," according to Vincent E.

Egan, whose Minneapolis-based VEE Corporation presents Sesame Street Live in cooperation with Children's Television Workshop.

"While parents will recognize that Sesame Street live has all the elements of quality theater, the charm for children lies in the familiar characters with well-established personalities, a simple plot enhanced with songs and dancing, and plenty of participation and actor-audience interaction."

"Big Bird Goes Hollywood," which will appear in Biloxi through Oct. 28 was produced by Bob Shipstad. The script was written by David Connell, executive producer of the "Sesame Street" TV series, and Jim Thurman. The production was directed and choreographed by Diane Arnold.

Original arrangements of such Sesame Street standards as "We Are All Monsters" and "So Nice To Be Here With You" were supplied by Paul Walberg, who also wrote, special music for the production.

Showcasing the talents of the 18 young actors, actresses and dancers who make up the company are stage settings, props and special effects created by art director Jim Waters.

Tickets for "Big Bird Goes Hollywood" are $8 and $7.50 plus computer charge and are now on sale at the Coliseum Box Office and all Ticketmaster Outlets.

"MAKING CONNECTION"

STRAIGHT ANSWERS TO YOUR QUESTIONS ABOUT TELEPHONE SERVICE.

Pat Santucci, District Manager

ANSWERS TO SOME OF THE MOST-ASKED QUESTIONS

Last year we included a coupon in South Central Bell Notes so customers could let us know what topics they would like more information about. Here are answers to some of them.

WHY DO I GET TWO BILLS FOR MY TELEPHONE SERVICE?

Your South Central Bell monthly bill includes charges for:

- your local telephone service
- long distance calls inside your Calling Zone
- 1+ and 0+ long distance calls outside your Calling Zone, depending on which long distance company you use

You may also receive bills from other companies for:

- telephone sets or equipment you lease, or
- long distance calls outside your Calling Zone that you make by using special code numbers

WHAT CAN I DO ABOUT LONG DISTANCE CALLS ON MY BILL THAT I DID NOT MAKE?

Once you've determined the long distance calls were not made from your phone by you, a friend or someone in your family, let us know by contacting your service representative. If it's a call in South Central Bell's long distance calling area, we'll find out how the mistake was made.

However, if the call is billed by your long distance carrier, you'll have to call the appropriate telephone number listed on your bill for assistance.

DO I HAVE TO CHOOSE A LONG DISTANCE COMPANY?

You may want to do so. In some locations customers now have the option of selecting a "preferred" long distance company for their "1+" and "0+" calls to places outside their South Central Bell Calling Zone. This "equal access" to long distance companies is not yet available to all customers.

But in line with FCC and Justice Department orders, South Central Bell is requesting that its customers with equal access availability choose a "preferred" long distance company. Those not making a choice are assigned a long distance company.

Due to competition between the companies, customers with equal access can now tailor their service to meet their calling needs. Customers decide which company's services best suit them.

NASA to present excellence awards

NASA Deputy Administrator Dale Myers will formally present the space agency's Excellence Award for Quality and Productivity this week to divisions of IBM and Martin Marietta.

The agency also announced that it is receiving nominations for candidates to be considered for the 1987 excellence award. The deadline for initial applications is Nov. 1.

IBM Corporation's Federal Systems Division, located near NASA's Johnson Space Center,

Houston, and Martin Marietta Managed Space Systems, at NASA's Michoud Assembly Facility, New Orleans, are the first recipients of the NASA excellence award.

Martin Marietta operates Michoud under contract to NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center at Huntsville, Ala. It is at Michoud that the giant external fuel tanks are made for use on the Space Shuttle.

Myers will travel to Houston on Wednesday and New Orleans on Thursday to officially present the awards to company managers and employees in ceremonies at their respective facilities. The selection of the two firms was announced earlier this year.

The NASA Excellence Award for Quality and Productivity is designed to recognize the highest standards of performance among NASA contractors, subcontractors and suppliers who are members of the aerospace industry.

To be eligible, a company must be a NASA prime contractor, subcontractor or supplier of hardware, software, or mission processing and service support; employ a minimum of 100 workers; and the candidate facilty must be located in the United States.

In addition, the firm either must do half of its total business with NASA or conduct average yearly sales of at least $500,000 with the agency. The program is administered for NASA by the American Society for Quality Control.

Persons interested may stop by the church's office on Main and Federal streets Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Rev. Barber reports the church has some 2,000 bags to give to children for Trick-or-Treating.

Coast Electric employees were busy Friday afternoon visiting the various Hancock County schools picking up the many cans of food donated by students for the Food Pantry.

The drive was spearheaded by Allyson Keller of Jolly Rogers Printing who will distribute many gifts donated by several local merchants.

This was a very good community project, and it is good to see our children involved in helping their fellowman.

A gala celebration is scheduled for Dec. 5 at the Bay-Waveland Yacht Club for persons who attended Bay High School during the years of 1935 through 1945.

Hundreds of students in Mississippi classrooms are keeping a close eye on the stock market these days, watching the stocks they have purchased and, deciding when to buy and sell.

The money the students are using is hypothetical, but their interest is very real. The program is the Stock Market Game, a computer-based national competition that is used to stimulate student interest and provide instruction on the stock market.

The Mississippi Stock Market Game was started a year ago in a pilot program with 17 teams of five students. In the spring, 47 teams participated. That number has jumped to more than 200 teams for the current competition, said Peggy Howard, director of the American Enterprise Center.

The AEC, the economic education arm of the Mississippi Economic Council; McLarty and Company, a Jackson-based brokerage firm; and the Clarion-Ledger/Jackson Daily News are sponsors of the game.

In the competition, teams are given a hypothetical $100,000 to invest in the stock market. During the 10-week course of the game, the students use newspaper listings to follow their stocks and research various stocks before placing their buy and sell orders.

Elementary, junior high, and high school teams participate in different levels of competition. There is no limit on the number of teams a school can sponsor, and student interest has prompted many schools to sponsor more than one team.

"When one teacher asked her class who was interested in participating on the team, practically everybody wanted to do it," Howard said.

ASK OCHSNER

Q. Last year I got vaccinated for the flu. I don't know whether it was pure luck or the vaccine, but I didn't get sick at all last winter. How often do I need to update that vaccine? K.D., Reserve, La.

A. This time of year is the best time to start preparing for the winter months ahead by taking preventive health measures such as getting the flu vaccine.

Dr. Laurence Cortez, a specialist in infectious diseases at Ochsner Clinic, New Orleans, says it's necessary to take an influenza or flu shot every year to help guard against the disease. The true flu is characterized by a fever, cough and headache which may be severe enough to warrant bedrest for three to five days.

For the most part, the flu is not life-threatening, but more days are lost from work each year due to the disease than any other illness. In some cases, the flu can lead to severe respiratory infections and pneumonia, especially for people in a high-risk category.

The flu vaccine is highly recommended for persons in a high-risk category because there is an increased mortality rate in these people if they contract the flu. This high-risk category includes: persons age 65 and over; those with chronic health problems such as heart disease, lung disease, anemia, kidney disease, diabetes, other chronic metabolic disorders and smokers.

The flu is also very contagious which is why you hear of epidemics occurring at unpredictable intervals. There are several strains of the influenza virus and new strains are constantly developing.

These new viruses are often named according to their assumed place of origin. That is why you may hear about the Hong Kong flu one year and the Russian flu the next. Immunity from one strain does not protect you from other flu viruses, and immunity is only temporary.

Those people who work in the health care field or hold community service jobs may also wish to receive the vaccine, since the more contact with the public, the more likelihood of contracting the disease.

Side effects of the influenza vaccine are generally inconsequential in adults. In children, it may produce fever and other mild symptoms for a day or two. If you are allergic to eggs or chicken, however, you are not a good candidate to receive the flu vaccine. Dr. Cortez suggests that you consult your physician or the Hancock County Health Department to determine whether or not you are a good candidate to receive the vaccine.

MEC

Mississippi Economic Council

Mississippi Economic Council committee leaders are working on a strategy for the upcoming legislative session as the organization prepares for an aggressive campaign on issues important to business.

Committee members, working under the leadership of MEC's five councils, have been meeting for the past six months to formulate recommendations on a number of issues.

The recommendations will be presented to the MEC Board of Directors meeting Nov. 18 in Jackson.

Some of the major items under study include constitutional revision amendments, county unit, tort reform, taxation issues, the junior college system, and economic development.

The MEC board of directors will review the recommendations of its study committees and adopt an agenda for the 1988 legislative session.

Among the council's priorities for the session will be adoption of tort reform measures and of mandatory county unit. The council also plans to offer recommendations on constitutional amendments that should be placed on the ballot for voter approval.

MEC Chairman Kenneth Milam, a Jackson lawyer, will lead the actions of the 88-member board of directors at the November meeting.

The council is the state's largest organization of business, professional and industrial leaders.

ILLITERACY IS COSTLY PROBLEM

Business leaders with a sense of compassion used to worry about the illiteracy rate. Some tried to help through volunteer programs, others contributed financially to fund these programs.

Business leaders now have a more urgent reason for looking very closely at the illiteracy problem. It's costing them a lot of money.

Statistics show that nationally, illiteracy costs the United States more than $225 billion a year. That cost is due to lost productivity, accidents, errors, unrealized tax revenues, welfare and unemployment payments, and crime and prisons.

In Mississippi, an estimated 720,000 adults 25 years of age and older do not have a high school diploma.

In past years, illiteracy was more of an individual problem than a business problem. Not being able to read and write was a burden for that person, but it did not affect the job the worker did in the plant or factory.

Technology has changed all that. Almost all plants now are converting to statistical control methods and computerized equipment. This new technology takes training and it takes a literate employee to be able to handle the change.

The definition of functional literacy continues to increase as the workplace becomes more demanding. Functional literacy was a third grade education years ago; it has moved up to eighth grade level now by most standards.

Businesses around the state are confronting the problem, taking advantage of programs already in place or starting their own. It's a problem that cannot be ignored.

Traffic records project recognized nationally

The Mississippi Traffic Records Improvement project, which developed a uniform accident report for law enforcement officers, has gained national recognition in two steps taken by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

The successful implementation of the uniform traffic accident report, developed by the State Traffic Records Committee of representatives from the Governor's Office of Federal-State Programs, the Department of Public Safety, Highway Department, Department of Health, Department of Education, Police Chiefs' Association and Sheriffs' Association, was commended by NHTSA and the Federal Highway Administration (FHWA) as an outstanding model of cost-effective expenditure of highway safety funds.

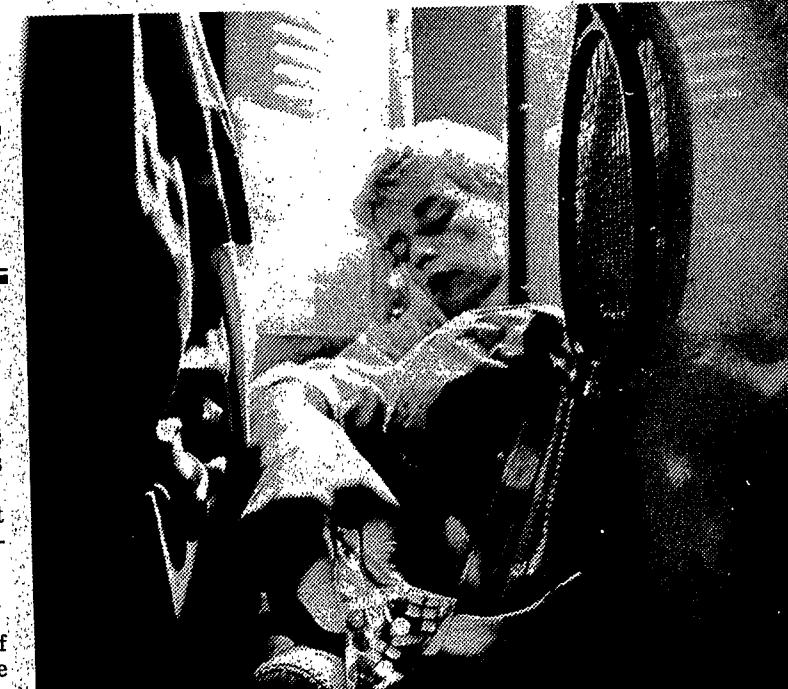

Prior to the 1985 requirement that the uniform traffic accident report be used by all law enforcement officers investigating accidents, approximately 44 different forms were being used in Mississippi.

The uniform report is designed to assist local law enforcement agencies and the Department of Public Safety in collecting consistent, timely and accurate data on traffic accidents.

Because Mississippi was recognized for its traffic records improvements through cooperative agency efforts, Ronald G. Sennett, Federal-State Programs' traffic records coordinator, was selected to join representatives from Iowa, New Mexico, Ohio, Washington and Wyoming in working with NHTSA to develop a traffic records course for governors' highway safety representatives and highway safety program managers.

Sennett, who recently met with the course development committee at the Transportation Safety Institute in Oklahoma City and has been asked to serve as one of the course instructors, said "the objective of this course is to make those involved in promoting highway safety aware of the critical nature of traffic records data when developing, monitoring or evaluating projects to address highway safety problems."

jury, the process of identifying the weapon from which a bullet is fired. The first step is to examine the bullet and see if it has the characteristics to have been fired from the gun in question, Tidwell said.

After establishing that the bullet could have indeed been shot from the gun, Tidwell said he took a bullet from stock in the testing laboratory and fired it from the gun into a tank of water which is several feet deep and has a retrieval basket for the bullet.

Tidwell told the jury there was no question that the test bullet and the bullet which killed Tassin were fired from the same gun.

This fact was established by comparison of tool markings on both bullets, Tidwell said.

He explained that the tool markings are made on the bullet or projectile as it goes through the barrel of the gun.

The tool markings are an exact negative of the markings inside the barrel, Tidwell stated.

He also said he had determined that the bullet which had killed Holden lacked significant characteristics and markings to be identified.

FINAL ACTION

BY THE PROSECUTION

Following Tidwell's testimony, Golden reviewed items marked for identification and requested a photograph of Tassin's body which also included the walking cane be allowed in as evidence.

He told the court the picture was relevant to the case because Eddie Prevost had testified about the "old lady with a cane."

Defense attorneys objected on the basis that the photograph included Tassin's body.

Thomas ruled that only the portion of the photograph which showed the cane could be admitted as evidence.

When Golden said he wished more of the picture could be admitted, Thomas said, "it is kind of like Christmas and you wish for a lot of things."

Thomas also asked to see the cut being made on the photograph and Golden turned the photograph and scissors over to the judge who cut the photograph.

Necease objected to the "court's participation in the state's case."

Following a recess for lunch, Necease made a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty which was overruled.

At this time Ladner's wife, Candice, as a potential witness remained outside the courtroom, was present in the courtroom.

THURSDAY'S TESTIMONY

Most of Thursday's testimony was provided by Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator Delbert Seay, who had been placed in charge of the Holden and Tassin investigation by Sheriff Ronald Peterson.

Under questioning from Golden and Necease, Seay took the jury through the steps of the investigation, beginning at Holden's trailer the day the bodies were discovered by his daughter, Tessie Barnes.

Seay said he arrived at the mobile home about 11:38 a.m., meeting Deputy Dennis Tartavouille, who was already there.

The investigator said they had done little more than secure the area and make certain that the two dead women were the only people in the trailer when they were joined by Peterson and two other investigators, Glen Strong and Alvin Ladner.

Seay identified photographs taken at the scene by one of the other officers as well as a floor plan drawing of the trailer that had been prepared at the sheriff's department, explaining to the jurors where each photograph was taken.

Thomas originally refused, at Necease's objection, to allow a photo of Tassin's body to be introduced into evidence, but allowed the photo later during testimony from a New Orleans pathologist.

Seay explained that the front door was open and that Tassin's body was found about 15 feet from the door, while Holden was found in a bedroom.

A second photograph caused controversy after Seay stated that it showed damage to the door.

The judge pointed out to the jury that there had been a burglary at the trailer during the July preceding the deaths, saying the damage the photograph showed may have been related to that crime rather than the murders.

Seay's testimony was interrupted briefly to allow the pathologist, Dr. Paul McGary, to testify.

The doctor stated that both women died from gunshot wounds to the head and described the angles of entry of the bullets as well as the damage each one did.

He said his autopsies did not show any other possible causes of death.

In addition, he described the shot which killed Holden as being from close range because he found gunpowder on her skin.

The pathologist also explained that Tassin had an upper denture plate that had split, possibly from impact, and that half of it was protruding from her mouth when the body was brought to him in New Orleans.

Under Necease's questioning, he said the photograph of the body indicated a break because the line of the teeth was not symmetrical.

It was not possible to determine the approximate time of death from the autopsies, McGary added.

He also displayed two pieces of a projectile taken out of Holden's head, but said the bullet had gone straight through Tassin's brain.

With the jury out, Necease asked for a mistrial, citing the fact that Ladner is being tried only for Holden's murder at this point and that the Tassin death should not be made a major factor in the evidence.

Seay again took the stand to finish his testimony, relating the fact that a quantity of bay leaves were found on the trailer floor in a dining area and that a bullet was found when some clothing on top of a hamper was picked up and shaken.

That bullet was found about five feet from Tassin.

Barnes was not asked to come into the trailer at that point and authorities were not able to find anything missing, although Seay explained that the bedroom "looked like somebody went through it" because drawers were open and items such as clothing had been thrown around.

At that point, testimony was stopped to allow Thomas to excuse a juror with a health problem and replace her with the single alternate selected for the case, leaving the jury composed of nine women and three men.

Seay stated that the sheriff's department worked on the case by trying to locate as many people the two women knew as possible, then talk with them and run down leads.

After receiving two telephone calls from a Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Department Detective, Larry Antoine, Seay, Peterson and Strong traveled to Gentilly, La., to visit Alpine Jewelry with Antoine and an officer named Wolfe.

They met Barnes and Holden's son, Dennis Graubert, at the jewelry store to look at a ring Ladner had allegedly traded to the store in exchange for $65 in labor to remove the stone and place it in a gold cross.

Seay stated that they took statements at that time, then Peterson and Antoine obtained a search warrant and proceeded to Ladner's

River Ridge apartment.

Seay stated that they took statements at that time, then Peterson and Antoine obtained a search warrant and proceeded to Ladner's River Ridge apartment.

Necease's objection, to allow a photo of Tassin's body to be introduced into evidence, but allowed the photo later during testimony from a New Orleans pathologist.

Seay stated that they took statements at that time, then Peterson and Antoine obtained a search warrant and proceeded to Ladner's River Ridge apartment.

The investigator said that his job at that time was to sit outside with Barnes and Graubert in his vehicle until about 10 minutes after the other officers went inside.

After that, he went inside and Peterson, who was in a bedroom of the house, began handing him "various items of jewelry" to take to the two people in the car.

He said Barnes would then select items she said belonged to her mother.

He made about three trips with such items, he added.

According to Seay, Antoine made an inventory of the items Barnes had selected and later turned them over to Hancock County, where they were locked up until being requested as evidence by the attorneys in the case.

Seay said he left the Ladner apartment and went "around the corner" to the residence of the Schwankhart family, identified later in testimony as Ladner's in-laws.

At that home, he was given a .32 calibre revolver and a partially used box of shells he was told belonged to Ladner.

In addition, a woman named Sylvia Stewart came to the house and brought a watch she said Ladner had sold to her. The watch was later identified by Graubert and Barnes as belonging to Holden.

The investigator stated that most of this took place on Thanksgiving Day 1987, although the visit to the jewelry store took place the afternoon before.

He said he went back to Louisiana in December to talk with Eddie Prevost, a prisoner in the Jefferson Parish Correctional Center, after he was contacted by Louisiana authorities.

He stated that he never told any of the Louisiana authorities about the bay leaves and named about six of the sheriff's department personnel who knew.

Under cross examination by Necease, he said that he thought there might have been a few pieces of jewelry on the dining table in the trailer but that he did not know.

He said he did not personally find a jewelry box in the master bedroom, although an unlocked but closed box was found.

Necase asked what was done with jewelry taken from the Ladner apartment that Holden's children could not identify, and Seay said he took it back in the house and put it on the bed in the room where he had obtained it.

Under redirect questioning from Golden, Seay explained that tire track prints were taken at the trailer but that none of them matched any of the four vehicles already parked there when he arrived, which included two Mobile Medic units, a sheriff's department patrol car driven by Tartavouille and Barnes' vehicle.

Later tests indicated that they did not match Ladner's tires either, but the investigator explained that the parking lot was used for both the residents and the Brass Anchor customers.

With the jury out, Golden offered two statements, one regarding the gun and another from the defendant's wife that Thomas would not admit as evidence.

Without the jury present, Seay testified that the jewelry items for identification were actually given to Peterson by Candace Ladner.

Seay said he heard her say to Peterson, "Jeffrey brought these things back home on the morning of the 11th when he went to Mississippi."

Necease objected that that was not mentioned in her written statement.

In addition, there was a discussion of the ownership of the gun, which was purchased in 1982 by a woman who reported it taken in a July 1986 burglary that occurred about the time Schwankhart said Ladner first tried to sell it to him.

Thomas' would not allow this testimony to be presented to the jury because he felt it would imply that the defendant had committed a crime other than the one for which he was being tried.

Seay also said he did not know anything about allegations regarding Candace Ladner's treatment by law enforcement officers when Necease questioned him.

Seay said he had been the last to enter the house and knew nothing about how the woman was treated before he arrived or whether authorities had threatened to take her two-month-old child from her if she failed to cooperate.

Thomas said the wife's statement fell under at least two categories that would make it inadmissible as evidence in front of the jury.

PREVOST TESTIFIES

The next witness was Prevost, the Jefferson Parish inmate Seay had questioned.

Prevost, who admitted on the witness stand to having committed perjury during pretrial proceedings and to having had 160 felony arrests and 12 convictions, described himself as a "hail man" for the third floor of the facility.

The job gives him the freedom to move around the floor, and he said Ladner was moved to his floor for a time after being transferred for a reason he did not specify.

After he had problems with Ladner over telephone privileges, which Prevost schedules for the inmates on his floor, he said he had three or four conversations with the defendant about two women he claimed Ladner said he had killed in Mississippi.

He said Ladner told him about going to a trailer and shooting an old lady.

"Her teeth jumped out of her mouth when he shot her," Prevost said Ladner told him.

He described Ladner's alleged story as stating that a younger woman in a bedroom "was screaming for her life when he shot her" and had said she would give him her money and jewelry if he would not kill her.

He also said Ladner told him that he had dumped the contents of a bag of bay leaves in order to have something in which to carry jewelry he had taken, "went to his daddy's house for a while," then said he had been arrested after going to the Time Clock pawn shop in Metairie, La., "trying to get a cross melted down."

Under questioning by both attorneys, Prevost agreed with a description of himself as "a snitch, a rat, whatever" and said he had told a police detective about the matter.

He said Ladner was transferred off his floor after they had additional disagreements.

He also said he is the only convict on the third floor and the rest are pretrial detainees.

Although he had given Hancock County authorities a taped statement in December 1986, Necease pointed out that Prevost had not mentioned bay leaves, and that he had not mentioned them in pretrial testimony.

Prevost claimed to have told Peterson about the bay leaves after the tape was turned off.

He denied Necease's statements that he had found a particular police officer who had arrested him several times was one of Ladner's in-laws and that he had had problems with the other detainee for that reason.

Prevost also said he did not know when Ladner came in and wanted an appraisal on a ring he said he had received from his mother-in-law.

Although he was persistent and tried comparing the size of the stone in the ring he was talking about with other stones in the store, he was told he could not be provided an appraisal unless he showed the ring to shop personnel.

He returned about two weeks later with a ring, but because she did not

Hawks handed first loss

The Hancock North Central Hawks were upset Friday by the George County Rebels as they were defeated 26-14 in the first loss of the season.

"We were just flat and didn't play like we usually do," Coach Joe Shaw said Saturday.

The Hawks gained 78 yards rushing on 25 attempts and had 70 yards passing for a total offense of 148.

Shaw said this is the lowest total offense Hancock has had in several years.

"It just boiled down to they wanted it a lot more than we did and we just couldn't get anything going," Shaw continued.

Terrence Goff, who is currently the leading rusher for the Hawks only ran the ball four times for four yards.

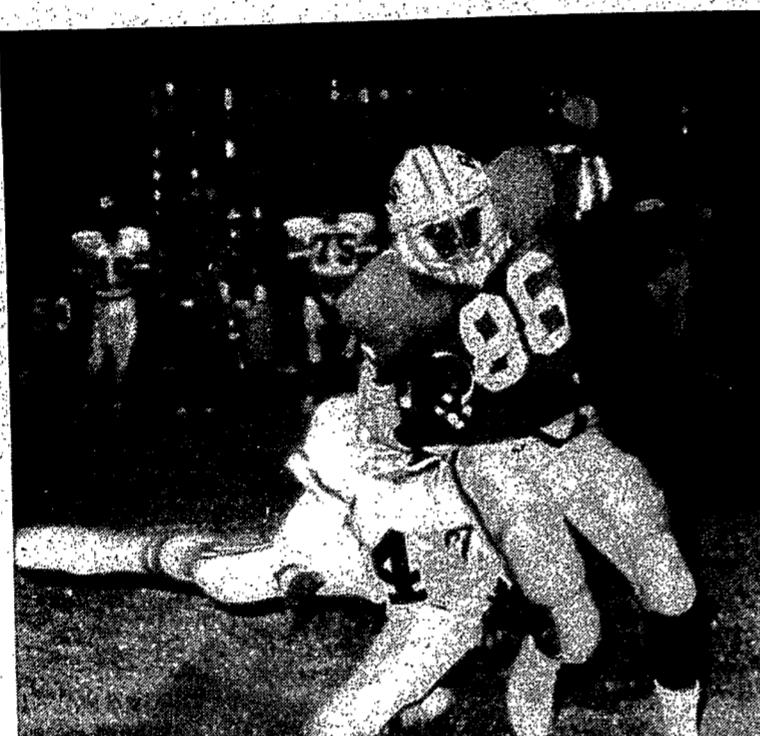

Goff continues to nurse a knee injury received in the previous game against the Long Beach Bearcats.

Vincent Cuevas carried the load for the Hawks with 10 carries and 57 yards, Shaw stated.

"Cuevas is a very consistent player and gives a good effort every week," he added.

Quarterback Jeff Moran hit in five of 11 passing attempts.

Tigers shut out St. Martin

By BRENDA HEATHCOCK

The Bay Senior High Tigers held the St. Martin Yellow Jackets scoreless Friday to take a 32-0 win over the 3A team.

Using a "solid game plan" the Tigers were able to execute a good passing game against St. Martin with 10 completions of 16 attempted passes.

"We believed we would be to pass against the Yellow Jackets after we had seen their defense in films," Head Coach Cleveland Williams said.

Included in the Tigers passing game was one pitch by Jeff Moran to Douglas Rhodes in the endzone for a touchdown.

The Tiger defense was able to contain the Yellow Jackets by stopping them during several substantial drives, Williams said.

The only score was after the buzzer sounded for the end of the first half as Rhodes pulled in the 11-yard touchdown pass.

The Tigers were able to make changes in the second half which sparked the team by using Andrew Collins who gained 130 yards on 19 carries, Ed Elliot who gained five yards, Darrain Washington, 24 yards and Rhodes, eight yards.

Striking with several air attacks from receivers Douglas Rhodes, Dante Curry and Monty Strong, the Tigers set up a third quarter touchdown from Chad LaFontaine to Darrain Washington on a two-yard plunge.

The Bay defense rose to the occasion in the third quarter, stopping St. Martin from scoring.

In the fourth quarter, the Tiger secondary was able to intercept three Yellow Jacket passes which set up various scores including a handoff from LaFontaine to Andrew Collins. Joel Duncan scored the extra point with a kick sailed just over the goal.

A kick in the endzone by Heath Hopgood put the Yellow Jackets deep in their own territory and this set up a key interception by Ricky Whavers who ran the ball back to the two-yard line where he was forced out of bounds.

LaFontaine scored on a keeper and Duncan made the PAT.

The Tigers were able to keep St. Martin from scoring with outstanding play Destin Brady, Rickey Whavers, Douglas Rhodes and Dante' Curry, Williams said.

The final Tiger score was set up by a pass play which Benny Tillman scrambled 17 yards to set the scene.

Tillman then handed off to Monty Strong who carried the ball 10 yards for the score.

"The Tiger ball club gave 100 percent and a total team effort in the victory over St. Martin," Williams said.

"We thought we had a good game plan and we took it to them. We had a balanced attack with 212 yards rushing and 163 yards passing," he said.

"We were also able to get some of our younger boys into the action and they all contributed to the victory," Williams said.

The Tigers will travel to Hancock North Central next week to battle the Hawks.

The St. Stanislaus Rock-a-chaws got back on the winning track Friday with an important win over the visiting East Central Hornets, 21-6.

Upping their record to an even 4-4, the Rocks fairly coasted to victory with two power-house TD's by Yasir Shabazz and a long pass reception by Freddie Wirstrom.

Moving from the Quarterback position to running back for this contest, Shabazz paced the Rocks on a drive that left them six inches from a score at the end of the first period of play.

With only seconds gone in the second period, Shabazz carried with a power leap over the pack to land him in the endzone for the Rock's first score of the evening.

The extra point attempt by kicker Michael Vegas was off the mark, and the score stood at 6-0 until late in the period.

On a long drive that started at the Rocks own 17, Shabazz, Jorge Pönjuan, Shannon Garrett, and play maker Cedric Smith moved the ball on the ground to the Hornets' 28 with just over two minutes remaining in the half.

On second down, Smith connected with receiver Freddie Wirstrom who then zoomed into the end zone for the second score of the contest.

With a little breathing room, the Rocks decided to go for the two-pointer and upped the score to 14-0 on a run by Shabazz to end the half.

The Rocks traded possessions with the Hornets through the third period, but early in the final quarter they exploded again.

On second down of possession at their own 49, Smith pitched out to the waiting Shabazz who scurried 51 yards for the third SSC score with 10:59 showing on the forth quarter clock.

The PAT kick by Michael Vegas was good and the Rocks led 21-0.

The Hornets scored on a pass reception with 7:10 left in the contest, but a two-point conversion attempt failed.

On the other side of the coin, the Rock defense logged some impressive individual performances by linebacker Jim Bradley, Andre Rollins, Jimmy Reisch and Jorge Pönjuan.

Through three and a half periods of play, the Rock defense consistently forced Hornet errors and put the visitors into more punting situations than they would have liked.

Hawks.....

George County had a total offense of 335 yards.

Hawk scoring was made on an 11-yard run by Vincent Cuevas in the first quarter and Larry Beech kicked the extra point.

Robert O'Hearn is credited with setting up the first touchdown by intercepting a Rebel pass and giving the Hawks good field position.

Cuevas scored again in the second quarter on a 33-yard TD reception from Moran.

These touchdowns gave the Hawks a 14-0 lead but the game didn't end there.

"It was all over then for the Hawks, George County shut us down completely," Shaw said.

Defensively, Shaw praised Corey Blaize, Keith Seller and Dewayne Acker, who all "had good games."

This week the Hawks will host the Bay Senior High Tigers.

Would you ask even the best seamstress to be your family surgeon? Would you ask a master plumber to be the principal of our high school? Should we then ask anyone but a qualified person to be a judge for our county?

The training of a lawyer is the result of 19 years of formal education before taking the Bar Examination, and still some fail the examination.

Every judge should be trained in legal matters. He should be professional. Citizens required to appear before a court of law deserve no less. The court system of the county deserves the best legal minds available to render an immediate just and fair judgement. It is less expensive for the individual and the county than an appeal process due to ignorance of the law of legal process.

I have been involved with cases all over the country helping other people. I am now back home and want to serve the people of Hancock County. Do you want me? Are you ready?...I am.

Ladner, trial.....

handle the transaction herself, Majeau said she could not say whether the ring introduced into evidence earlier was the same one Ladner brought in.

She said she remembered Ladner talking with a female customer who was trying to choose a ring for her husband. Looking at the defendant, she said he was heavier at the time and bearded, and she remembered him trying on two rings and telling the woman which one would look better on her husband "if he's a big man like me."

When she started the paperwork to get the transaction moving, one of the co-owners took over while she went to wait on another customer.

She said she did not see Ladner again but store records indicated that he had had a 1.18 carat diamond removed from a ring and set in a gold cross, then had traded the ring itself as payment for the $65 fee. In addition, someone had picked up the work.

She denied having seen Ladner's name on the front of the photo authorities showed her later, although Necaise pointed out that it had "Jeffrey Ladner, Hancock County Sheriff's Department" printed on the front and was the only one of the four with printing on the front.

"He called quite a lot of attention to himself. He was a bold type of guy and asked a lot of questions, and that second time when he dealt with the customer he really stood out to me," Majeau told Necaise.

STATEMENT

Peterson testified next, but had to be called back later for clarification after he confused Prevost with another prisoner.

The sheriff also described the crime scene procedures, although in less detail than Seay, and stated that the first real lead was a Nov. 25 telephone call from a Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Department detective, Larry Antoine.

He also talked about going to the jewelry store with Holden's son and daughter and identifying the ring that the store personnel stated Ladner had traded to them for the labor charge involved in transferring the ring stone to a cross.

He described getting the search warrant and going to the Ladner apartment at about 12:30 a.m. Thanksgiving morning, where Antoine kicked the door down for entry after several unsuccessful attempts to get someone to answer his knock.

He said he and the other officers removed several items of jewelry as potential evidence.

He said he went back to Louisiana in December to interview a prisoner he at first said he believed was Prevost, whom he later stated was a second prisoner who had been interviewed but whose statement was not being used in the case.

He said he did talk briefly with Prevost, but did not make a recording that day. The recording was made by Seay on a later visit, the sheriff said.

He also talked about trying to obtain information by listening to tapes from Holden's telephone recorder, but found only "general conversations" between employees, Brass Anchor Patrons, or Holden and her employees, and nothing useful in the case.

He said he was not present when the weapon obtained from Schwankhart was test-fired.

He said the prisoners told him nothing about bay leaves, either on the tape or off.

Necaise asked the question and stated that Prevost claimed his only previous mention of bay leaves had been to "the sheriff from here" "after they turned the tape off."

He said Candace Ladner gave him the jewelry he gave to Seay for identification, but he did not know whether any items not identified by Barnes was ever taken from the house.

Necaise tried to get Prevost's testimony excluded for reasons including admission of prejury, but

Thomas ruled against the request.

OTHER WITNESSES

Sgt. Don English of the Jefferson Parish Sheriff's Department testified that he knew Prevost and had talked with him about the incident in Mississippi, then called Seay.

He related part of the statements he had obtained from Prevost prior to calling the Hancock County investigator, with details including the fact that the older woman used a cane found near her body and that her teeth were ejected from her mouth when she was shot. He also mentioned the bay leaves on the floor.

He said he accompanied the Hancock County investigators on both trips to visit inmates at the Jefferson Parish jail, but took no notes, made no report and did not act on the case because it was not under his jurisdiction.

Grabert testified next, stating that he could identify only a watch and the ring that belonged to his mother and could not swear the rest of the jewelry in evidence at the trial was hers.

He described his sister as "going straight to" her mother's things when Seay brought them jewelry in a box while they waited inside the investigator's car at Ladner's apartment.

He said his mother constantly wore jewelry and had the ring on when he had last seen her about a week before she died.

Antoine talked about going with Seay and Peterson to Alpine Jewelry, demonstrating how he showed the photos to the store employees in order to conceal Ladner's name at the top of his photo.

He was also the only witness Thursday to state that the defendant was in the apartment along with Candace Ladner and the baby when the search warrant was executed.

Questioning Thursday from neither state nor defense attorneys indicated whether Ladner was arrested when the search warrant was executed at the River Ridge apartment.

Antoine said he knew Candace Ladner because he had frequented a coffee shop where she had worked.

He also described the visit to the Schwankhart home and receiving the watch from Sylvia Stewart, one of the family's daughters.

He said he did not know what was done with any jewelry that was found in the Ladner apartment but not identified as belonging to Holden, although he said he saw a quantity of jewelry piled on the bed.

The court recessed at about 8:30 p.m. Thursday.

Bananas arriving at the Port of Gulfport.

How Hancock Bank helped South Mississippi go bananas.

It was the early 30's, and South Mississippi's lumber boom had just about run its course.

Without the millions of board feet coming in each month, the workers at the once-thriving Port of Gulfport had nothing left to do but go home and look for new work.

But Hancock Bank stepped forward, and with the help of government turned things around.

Using a special bond issue trustee by the bank, the Port of Gulfport built new warehouses. Revamped the facilities. And made the port more accommodating to different kinds of cargo, like the bananas that come from Central America.

Today, it's hard to imagine the Coast without our port, and the $78,000,000 and 2,800 jobs it generates each year for our state's economy.

From the earliest days of its existence, Hancock Bank has always looked ahead to what South Mississippi could be. And we've provided the personal service and financial means to make it possible.

Some call it by the French names—"daube" (dobe) or "boeuf a la mode." Others just call it "pot roast"—but, whatever you choose to call it, this beef chuck or round roast, slowly simmered in a heavy pot, redolent with seasonings and generous splashes of red wine, is delicious!

And what a culinary miracle of sorts this technique works on less tender cuts of meat! I like the first blade cut of the chuck or the arm bone roast best for this dish, for it seems to give extra flavor. (I am also one of those cooks who believe that you must have at least a few pieces of meat with the bone in when you make beef stew, for using only the boneless beef won't give you the richness which the marrow in the bone imparts.)

And just about the best daube or pot roast cook I know is my long-time friend, Delores Bolden. Somehow mine never comes out just like hers, even though I've watched and tasted and tasted through the years as she cooked it. Here's:

DAUBE NEW ORLEANS
4 to 5 lb. chuck roast
2 or 3 cloves garlic, slivered
4 Tbsp. olive oil
2 onions, chopped
Bay leaf
Dashes of basil, cayenne pepper, black pepper, salt to your taste
Hot pepper sauce

2 cups or more burgundy wine
Water as needed
Make slits in the chuck roast, and poke the garlic slivers into the slits. Barely cover the bottom of a large cast iron Dutch Oven or other heavy pot with olive oil, and sear the roast quickly over high heat, almost burning it. That's part of the secret of the lush, dark sauce or gravy. (I usually set off the smoke alarm when I do this.)

At any rate, reduce the fire, and add the onions, along with the other seasonings, and keep watching to ensure that the meat doesn't stick to the bottom of the pot.

Cut the flame down to just-simmering heat, pour the wine over, and cover the pot. I add an extra splash of hot pepper sauce at this point. Simmer the roast for two hours or more, until it is fork-tender, adding wine or water as needed, turning the meat if necessary to ensure that rich dark brown coat all over. Serve with rice.

I often add halved Irish potatoes and onions, along with carrots, 45 minutes or so before the roast is done. The secret of this daube or pot roast, as in many other Southern-Creole-Cajun dishes of this sort is, as Delores taught me years ago, to "sear high and keep the flame low." (Six servings, with, hopefully, leftovers for hash or meat pie.)

Food & Fiber Center's role: jobs, new products, savings

By Barry W. Jones
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Center

While Mississippi has long ranked with the best among food and fiber producing states, the state has lagged far behind in processing its raw products into consumer-ready goods.

Because so much of Mississippi's farm production is shipped out of state for processing, the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, through its Food and Fiber Center, has been aggressively working on a mission to increase the value of agricultural, aquacultural, forestry and marine products already being grown in the state.

The effort also is aimed at giving the state a competitive footing if projections come true that costs of processing, marketing and distribution of food products will grow in importance in the national economy over the next decade.

If all of Mississippi's $3 billion farm value, with an estimated consumer ready value of $15 billion, could be processed in-state, Mississippians might realize another $12 billion each year and bring economic growth and stability to one of the nation's poorest states.

In this effort, the Food and Fiber Center has enjoyed some dramatic successes. The center can directly trace its efforts to helping create thousands of new jobs, introducing numerous new food products into the marketplace, and to savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars for agribusinesses through improved management, production and marketing.

Unlike traditional economic development organizations, which most states have, the Food and Fiber Center is a one-of-a-kind organization with its focus on expanding, enhancing and creating agri-industries and agribusinesses in Mississippi.

"We do not get involved with securing economic development activity from outside Mississippi," said Dr. Joe McGilberry, manager of the center. "That is the job of our state and local economic development organizations. We support them in their efforts, but they are the professionals in that area."

He said the center's accomplishments have come mainly through the staff's ability to focus on providing decision making information to entrepreneurs and leaders within Mississippi firms and industries.

This means the center staff is involved in educational activities with industries such as seafood, poultry, beef, catfish, forestry, feed and grain milling, vegetable, fruit and nut operations, specialty food products and furniture manufacturing.

The center has maintained a multidisciplinary staff of specialists in management, industrial engineering, economics, food technology and marketing and distribution. Staff members also can call on a parent organization, the Division of Agriculture, Forestry and Veterinary Medicine, and on other faculty resources at Mississippi State University to provide service to clients.

So far support for agribusiness has fallen into five broad categories including new ventures, business management, home-grown industries, new product development and economic development.

New ventures have been supported through feasibility studies and economic analyses intended to chart a more certain course for people willing to try new ventures.

Center activity with home-grown industries also is diverse. Demand on center staff in this area has been high, and more than 60 firms or individual entrepreneurs have requested and received help. With this help, 32 new products have been introduced to the marketplace. Work in this area also led to the formation of a Mississippi Specialty Foods Association.

While the home-grown industries offer a new and nontraditional route for placing added value to Mississippi-grown products, the center also works with more traditional food and fiber processors.

"As a result of this work new beef and ham products, new poultry products, catfish and seafood products and dry mixes have been developed and introduced," McGilberry said.

While focusing on industries and businesses already in Mississippi, the center also serves traditional state economic development work by being an information resource for impact studies on proposed industrial sites for outside industries considering Mississippi.

If a single commodity can be singled out to demonstrate how the Food and Fiber Center has aided Mississippi, the farm-raised catfish industry would be the best example. The center has developed techniques and data bases necessary for this industry to evaluate the potential for new and expanding catfish processing facilities.

We conducted 11 major feasibility studies for catfish processing plants between 1979 and 1986," McGilberry said. "Four of these plants are now in operation. Total investment in the four plants is about $26 million with more than 2,000 new jobs created."

Activities of the Food and Fiber Center have convinced many agribusiness leaders that this economic development concept offers a strategic key to solving problems in Mississippi's distressed economy.

Food & Fiber Center's role: jobs, new products, savings

By Barry W. Jones
Mississippi Cooperative Extension Center

While Mississippi has long ranked with the best among food and fiber producing states, the state has lagged far behind in processing its raw products into consumer-ready goods.

Because so much of Mississippi's farm production is shipped out of state for processing, the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service, through its Food and Fiber Center, has been aggressively working on a mission to increase the value of agricultural, aquacultural, forestry and marine products already being grown in the state.

The effort also is aimed at giving the state a competitive footing if projections come true that costs of processing, marketing and distribution of food products will grow in importance in the national economy over the next decade.

If all of Mississippi's $3 billion farm value, with an estimated consumer ready value of $15 billion, could be processed in-state, Mississippians might realize another $12 billion each year and bring economic growth and stability to one of the nation's poorest states.

In this effort, the Food and Fiber Center has enjoyed some dramatic successes. The center can directly trace its efforts to helping create thousands of new jobs, introducing numerous new food products into the marketplace, and to savings of hundreds of thousands of dollars for agribusinesses through improved management, production and marketing.

Unlike traditional economic development organizations, which most states have, the Food and Fiber Center is a one-of-a-kind organization with its focus on expanding, enhancing and creating agri-industries and agribusinesses in Mississippi.

"We do not get involved with securing economic development activity from outside Mississippi," said Dr. Joe McGilberry, manager of the center. "That is the job of our state and local economic development organizations. We support them in their efforts, but they are the professionals in that area."

He said the center's accomplishments have come mainly through the staff's ability to focus on providing decision making information to entrepreneurs and leaders within Mississippi firms and industries.

This means the center staff is involved in educational activities with industries such as seafood, poultry, beef, catfish, forestry, feed and grain milling, vegetable, fruit and nut operations, specialty food products and furniture manufacturing.

The center has maintained a multidisciplinary staff of specialists in management, industrial engineering, economics, food technology and marketing and distribution. Staff members also can call on a parent organization, the Division of Agriculture, Forestry and Veterinary Medicine, and on other faculty resources at Mississippi State University to provide service to clients.

So far support for agribusiness has fallen into five broad categories including new ventures, business management, home-grown industries, new product development and economic development.

New ventures have been supported through feasibility studies and economic analyses intended to chart a more certain course for people willing to try new ventures.

Center activity with home-grown industries also is diverse. Demand on center staff in this area has been high, and more than 60 firms or individual entrepreneurs have requested and received help. With this help, 32 new products have been introduced to the marketplace. Work in this area also led to the formation of a Mississippi Specialty Foods Association.

While the home-grown industries offer a new and nontraditional route for placing added value to Mississippi-grown products, the center also works with more traditional food and fiber processors.

"As a result of this work new beef and ham products, new poultry products, catfish and seafood products and dry mixes have been developed and introduced," McGilberry said.

While focusing on industries and businesses already in Mississippi, the center also serves traditional state economic development work by being an information resource for impact studies on proposed industrial sites for outside industries considering Mississippi.

If a single commodity can be singled out to demonstrate how the Food and Fiber Center has aided Mississippi, the farm-raised catfish industry would be the best example. The center has developed techniques and data bases necessary for this industry to evaluate the potential for

National study reveals

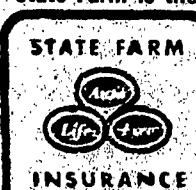

4-H has positive effect on members

More than 5 million youth each year take part in some activity of the 4-H youth program. For some the benefits of 4-H may be short-lived, but for most, participation in the organization has long-lasting effects.

A nationwide study of 4-H alumni, alumni of other youth organizations and adults with no experiences in youth organizations revealed that 4-H does have a positive effect on the lives of individuals who were involved in the program as youths.

The study, conducted by the Texas A&M University System found that former 4-H members are more active in community activities, particularly in leadership roles than nonmembers and children of 4-H alumni are more likely to be involved in youth organizations, including 4-H.

The randomly selected sample of individuals in the study included 710 former 4-H members and 743 members of other youth organizations. The remainder 309 respondents, had not been involved in organized groups during their youth.

"The study revealed some positive findings as well as some areas of the program that may need to be strengthened," said Dr. Shirley Hastings, youth development specialist with the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service and a member of the National 4-H Impact Study Committee.

4-H alumni felt that 4-H was more helpful than other youth organizations in helping them gain knowledge and skills and in developing a feeling of self-worth.

"This is right on target with the mission and goals of 4-H," Hastings said. "The transfer of knowledge from the land grant university and acquiring skills based on that knowledge have been the roles of the 4-H program since its beginning."

4-H alumni said that they valued their opportunities to learn about careers during involvement in the organization and on the average, 4-H alumni stayed in school longer and had higher annual incomes than adults with no experiences in youth organizations.

Only 18 percent of the alumni surveyed had annual incomes of less than $15,000. Thirty-five percent of the non-participants had annual incomes of less than $15,000.

Alumni take part in Extension educational programs and activities to a greater degree than former members of other youth groups as well as former non-participants in youth groups.

4-H membership was rated by respondents as having a high, positive image when compared to other youth programs. But respondents also identified some limiting factors affecting the growth and impact of the program.

The study revealed that many of the non-participants said they had not taken part in 4-H because they did not think it was available to them.

The average age of the alumni surveyed was 42. Therefore, their impressions are of the 4-H program during the late 1950s and 1960s.

"These non-participants were reared primarily in urban areas and although 4-H was available in these areas in the 1950s and 1960s the program was probably not as urban oriented as it is today," Hastings said.

"I think we need to keep in mind that there have been many changes in the program in the past 20 to 25 years and some of the program weaknesses pointed out by the survey may have already been modified."

Another limiting factor was the program's inability to retain members into their late teens. Fifty-nine percent of the 4-H alumni reported dropping out of the program because it no longer met their interest.

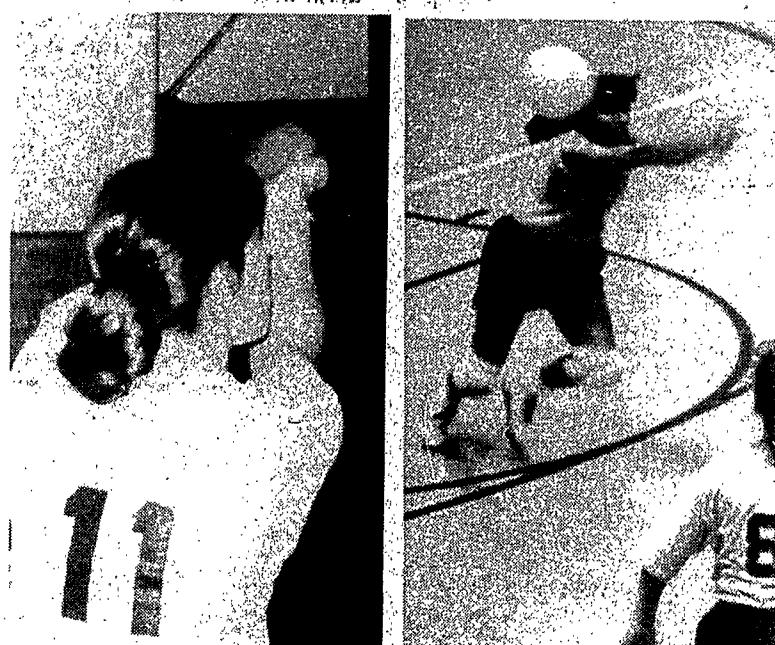

"I think this factor has implications for program planning, but I think we will always have this problem," Hastings said. "By the time members get old enough to drive there are so many activities competing for their time."

"Even when you consider the limiting factors revealed, this study has shown what we have always known, that youth development programs in general, and 4-H in particular, can make a difference," Hastings said.

The study, the first of three 4-H impact studies planned, was funded by the Extension Service of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Bankruptcy proceedings being eased, says federal judge

Although debtors and creditors who participate in bankruptcy litigation rarely leave the proceedings in a happy mood, laws and courts have, in recent years, made matters easier for both, said U.S. Bankruptcy Court Judge Edward H. Gaines in a talk delivered at a Service Corps of Retired Executive seminar, at the Biloxi Inn on Sept. 16.

Attendees included representatives of small businesses and financial interests along the Mississippi Coast.

Within the past ten years, changes in federal laws relating to bankruptcy, and the advent of various "chapter" designations, codes have become less painful for debtors and more precise for creditors, Judge Gaines noted.

"Whoever or whatever drew up the old bankruptcy codes didn't have a mother or a father," he said.

He added, however, that many bankruptcies could be avoided if business people and individuals "stopped operating with champagne tastes with a beer budget," and who would protect themselves against financial emergencies. Go easy with credit cards, he also advised.

Retailers facing discount store competition need to apply extra effort to combat it and to stay alive.

The other workshop speakers were Robert Alan Byrd, a Biloxi attorney specializing in bankruptcy litigation, and H. Kenneth Lefoldt, Jr. of Jackson, who is a certified public accountant and bankruptcy specialist.

Byrd covered the myriad of regulations and procedures involved in bankruptcy litigation. Protective action for the debtor and the creditors was emphasized, with considerable attention to regulations under the familiar Chapter 11, which can be applied by corporations or individuals. It can help a debtor recover from a potential bankruptcy over an extended period of time, such as fifteen years, and possibly more.

He advised creditors to be prompt in following regulations, such as establishing and reporting proof of claims. In general, it was apparent that both a debtor and creditors can make good use of legal services.

Lefoldt discussed the variety of accounting services needed in bankruptcy cases. One of the problems that may even be a contribut to a business failure is lack of good accounting procedures. "Keep your records up to date to know where you stand and where you're headed," he advised.

A clear analysis of company records will determine which chapter is best to file under, and to evaluate chances of continuing the business. The sooner this is determined the better Lefoldt said.

He also listed the reasons why companies (and individuals) get themselves into a bankruptcy bind. Causes are poor management, lack of foresight, not keeping up with market changes, shortage of knowledge or skills in important areas of business procedures, poor timing or too slow action, and poor cost/profit calculations.

The bankruptcy workshop was one of a continuing series sponsored by the SCORE counseling arm of the U.S. Small Business Administration, and serves the business community as well training and informing SCORE counselors. The workshop program is under the direction of Sidney Wogan.

Counties affected by label changes

By Patti Drapala
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Farmers in more than half of Mississippi's 82 counties will have to seek permission to apply certain pesticides because of the danger the chemicals present to several animal species, according to a requirement by the Environmental Protection Agency.

Labels on specific pesticides will instruct users as to whether they are required to obtain additional information, said Ruth Morgan, pesticide use coordinator for the Mississippi Cooperative Extension Service.

"In order to protect endangered species from adverse effects of pesticides, many product labels will soon change," Morgan said. "The changes, which are required by the Endangered Species Act, are being implemented by the EPA."

Morgan said the information users must obtain will identify areas in these counties where the particular pesticide may not be applied. Information will be distributed according to the product's use.

For pesticides used on rangeland, corn, cotton, grain sorghum, soybeans and small grains, users will request the pesticide endangered species bulletin from their county office. The eight counties identified by the EPA are Claiborne, Copiah, Hinds, Itawamba, Jackson, Lowndes, Monroe and Noxubee.

The bulletin sent to pesticide users will include a county map identifying the ranges of each endangered species using commonly recognized landmarks such as roads, powerlines and water bodies. Pesticides will be listed by active ingredients jeopardizing the species.

A list of endangered species that are protected will also be included in the bulletin.

"The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service (FWS) is defining geographic areas where certain pesticides jeopardize the survival of endangered species," Morgan said. "The EPA is protecting these species by prohibiting use of these pesticides or by instituting other safeguards in the range of the species."

For pesticides used in forests and on mosquito larvae, users will call specialists with the FWS to identify areas where the products may not be used.

The telephone number for the Mississippi office of the FWS is (601) 965-4900. Over 43 counties in the state may be affected by limitations on forest and mosquito pesticides. They include: Forrest, George, Greene, Hancock, Harrison, Jackson, Pearl River, Perry and Stone.

Everybody's Science

Plants for cities

By Jim Benson

That tree on the corner is one of your best neighbors. And that park in the next block is more than just another pretty place.

According to Harold B. Tukey, Jr., director of the Center for Urban Horticulture at the University of Washington-Seattle, plants are one of the most important elements of the modern city, but one of the most overlooked.

Plants in cities do many important things: they provide privacy, they provide food to gardeners, they protect us from the harsh effects of climate and their natural beauty has a calming effect on harried city dwellers. Until recently, the people who grew plants looked to agriculture for answers, but agriculture is not giving appropriate answers for urban environments.

For example, two trees of the same species, planted on opposite sides of a building, grow differently because one gets more light in the morning and the other gets more light in the afternoon. "The plants are very different when they're growing in an agricultural situation, where so many shade trees are grown," said Tukey. "So you have to acclimate the plant to the city. And no one knew that."

Tukey said that one-third of the landscape plantings in Seattle fail because landscapers, city planners, and the horticultural industry don't know enough about how plants adapt to urban areas. He said that research needs for urban plants include site-specific projects to accommodate the vast differences in urban plant environments. Specifically:

- How do plants grow and develop under different conditions of light?
- How do air and water move through urban soils?
- How can we control insect pests in densely populated areas?
- What new plants can we develop for urban use?
